

Mindshift - TRAILER

Hello and welcome to Mind Shift, a podcast about innovation and management brought to you by the UCL School of Management. Here at the School of Management, we have the ambition of carrying out world leading research to help managers and entrepreneurs address the new challenges that come from fundamental changes in technology, society and the environment.

Perhaps you listened to the first series of the Mind Shift podcast, and enjoyed learning about novel management ideas and concepts that draw on our research. If so, you'll be pleased to know we're bringing you a brand new series. The second series of the Mind Shift podcast will be hosted by me, Davide Ravasi, and the Director of the School and as your host, I look forward to bringing you conversations with members of our diverse research community. Each episode will be peering through the lens of their research to get an insight into the rapidly shifting world of business and management into how my colleagues work is helping businesses across the globe to transform and thrive in an increasingly complex world.

In this series, we'll explore topics such as diversity, inclusion, artificial intelligence, and hybrid working to name just a few. So, whether you're a manager, leader, policymaker, entrepreneur, or academic or you aspire to become one, you soon discover how these valuable insights can be applied to your role in your business. And if you didn't listen to Series One, well now it's time to catch up. You'll find it on all the usual podcasting platforms.

Remember to hit subscribe to make sure you're the first to know when series to arise. Thank you in advance for listening to me Davide Ravasi and Mind Shift the podcast from the UCL School of Management.